Easy payment form

This form when accompanied by a payment, is to be used to make a personal superannuation contribution which may qualify the member to be eligible for the Government Super Co-contribution

The Australian Government superannuation co-contribution is an initiative to assist low to middle income earners save for their retirement. If you are eligible and make personal undeducted (after tax) contributions to your superannuation account, the Government will match your personal contribution with a co-contribution up to a certain limit.

From 1 July 2009, you will be eligible for the co-contribution if:

- you make a personal undeducted (after tax) contribution by 30 June each year into your super fund account,
- your total income (“assessable income” plus “reportable fringe benefits”) is less than $61,920 for the 2009-2010 year,
- 10% or more of your total income is from eligible employment, running a business or a combination of both
- you are less than 71 years old at the end of the year of income
- you do not hold an “eligible temporary resident visa” at any time during the year, and
- you lodge your income tax return for the income tax year.

Receiving total annual income of less than $61,920 is not enough on its own to qualify you for a co-contribution. You must meet all the conditions listed above to qualify for a co-contribution.

The maximum co-contribution payable by the Government is $1,000 and is available to members with assessable income and reportable fringe benefits of less than $31,920 in 2009-2010. The Government will match the personal contribution of the member by $1.00 for each $1.00 contributed by the member.

The maximum co-contribution of $1,000, which is payable for income of $31,920 or less per year, is reduced at the rate of 5 cents per dollar up to $61,920, at which level the co-contribution is reduced to nil. Please note that the upper and lower income thresholds are indexed annually to reflect changes in average wages.

Payments by the Commonwealth Government will be made to your superannuation account after you submit your income tax return for the year for which you were eligible to receive a co-contribution.
